

Coshocton Man Owns Coxey's Famous Chariot

John Rodocker, of New Bedford, who was one of the jurors Wednesday in the case of Chas. Saxton, charged with driving a horse to death, is the owner of the famous wagon which J. S. Coxey, of Coxey's Army fame, used in making his celebrated journey to Washington a few years ago. Mr. Rodocker states that he bought it for $135 and it is used as a band wagon by the New Bedford band boys. He says that the original cost of the wagon was something over $1100.

The wagon figured in an exciting experience a short time ago when Mr. Rodocker and the band boys were driving to what is known as the Election schoolhouse near New Bedford. Two young men were driving with their girls as the band wagon came along and a "spill" resulted in which one fellow and his girl were thrown out but not seriously hurt although their clothes were badly iron.

Race Horse Men Have Awful Grouch

Decline to Start Race as Long as Gov. Hughes is on The Fair Grounds

[By Telegraph to The Age]

Ballston, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The openly expressed hostility of owners of trotting horses taking part in the events at the Saratoga county fair toward Governor Charles E. Hughes held up the racing program at the fair grounds for an hour and a half.

Governor Hughes was a visitor at the fair and addressed a big gathering, which gave him a hearty welcome and an attentive hearing. The governor's presence on the grounds, however, was resented by the horse owners, who have taken exception to the governor's efforts to suppress betting on the racetracks of the state. As a consequence they refused to start their horses while the executive was on the grounds.

The "strike" of the horse owners created an unprecedented situation, and caused the management of the fair marked embarrassment. When the conditions became known, a sensation was created among the thousands of spectators on the grounds, and considerable pressure was put upon the trotting men to change their attitude and run off the races as scheduled.

Fair Officials Take Hand.
In this the officials of the fair took the lead, urging their case strongly upon the recalcitrant owners and pointing out the awkwardness of the situation caused by the balk in the program. Their efforts were fruitless, however, the owners remaining obdurate, and for an hour and a half refusing to budge from their position. They openly declared that Governor Hughes had antagonized their interests and that they proposed to retaliate by refusing to take their horses out on the track while he was present.

Those in charge of the fair threatened to have the owners disqualified for their refusal to come to time when the races were called, but even this threat had no effect in altering their attitude, and the races were held up during the entire period of the executive's visit to the fair. Immediately upon his departure the racing proceeded.

Hughes Refuses to Talk.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Governor Hughes, on his return from Ballston, had nothing to say regarding the action of the horse owners at the Saratoga county fair.

TRYING TO KNOCK OUT STATE FAIR

[By Telegraph to The Age]

Columbus, O., Aug. 27.—Injunction proceedings to prevent the holding of the state fair next week were started in the court of common pleas by the Smith Agricultural Chemical company of Columbus, which firm has state department of agriculture has been having trouble with reference to the quality of the Smith company's commercial fertilizer.

H. M. Brown president; Thomas L. Calvert, secretary, and the full state board of agriculture; Auditor of State Walter D. Guilbert and Treasurer of State W. F. McKimmon are made parties defendant to the suit, in which the Smith company asks that these officers be enjoined from expending state funds for the fair.

The suit is brought by the Smith company as a taxpayer, after the attorney general had refused to bring the action when requested to do so by the Smith company. The action is the outgrowth of the refusal of the fair authorities to grant space for an exhibit by the Smith company of its product at the coming fair.

The petition alleges that the fair is not a public institution, but a private corporation affair, and that state money is wrongfully used in paying for horse racing, which, the petition says, is a game of chance; the salaries of officers of the fair, etc.

Attorneys retained by the board to defend its interests in court assert that the suit would have no effect on the plans for the fair, and that it will be held as scheduled. No date has been set by the court for hearing the petition.

ROBBERS BREAK IN CONESVILLE STATION

Get Little Booty However
---Black Run Also Visited

The Pennsylvania station at Conesville was burglarized Wednesday night some time between 6:10 p. m. when Agent J. H. Cornell went home and 5 o'clock a. m. when a broken window was discovered by persons who happened along the station.

So far as can be discovered the thieves got nothing but a pocket tool kit valued at about $3 and four pennies which were in the cash drawer. Agent Cornell has notified Superintendent P. A. Bonebrake and Detective Chas. Doney, of Coshocton.

It is also reported that the station at Black Run this side of Newark was broken into Wednesday night. An entrance was gained into the Conesville ticket office by breaking a pane of glass, 25x34, in a bay window on the south side. Agent Cornell is always careful to carry the cash home with him at night and the burglars were treated to an unpleasant surprise when they broke the cash drawer open.

They left the money drawer lying open on the desk and the papers were left lying in a pile.

DECISION WILL BE HELD TILL SATURDAY

Seven Bids Filed But the Names Are Not Made Public

Seven bids for the purchase of the Main street rink and one bid for leasing it were considered Thursday morning by Judge Nicholas, Receiver L. D. Schott, Attorney T. H. Wheeler, who represents Hiram Wisenburgh's half interest in the Rink Co. and J. C. Adams, who represents W. F. Darling and E. C. DeHart.

The conference was held at the judge's office at the court house. After going over the bids, which ranged from $450 to $800 for purchasing the rink and $450 for leasing it, Judge Nicholas decided to give all the parties connected with the case until Saturday morning at 9 o'clock to think the matter over and then come to some agreement.

In case the parties concerned cannot agree, Judge Nicholas will simply dispose of the matter according to law, even though the whole thing should be eaten up and nothing be left for the stockholders. There will at least be enough to satisfy the claims of the creditors, it is thought.

Coffins? Awful Thought
Visions of the rink being turned into a storage place for hearses and coffins arose when it was announced that one of the bids had been made by a local undertaker.

Another bid indicated that the rink was wanted for polo purposes. In fact there are two bids which if accepted would probably result in roller skating.

The other bids were from contractors.

What's a Skate Worth?

One of the bids was for $800 for both building and contents and another was for $723 for the building alone. The question arose whether the contents of the building such as the roller skates, stoves and other loose things would bring $75. Receiver Schott said in his opinion the $723 bid was the better one. Then Judge Nicholas asked him to make a recommendation of what he thought should be done in the matter. Mr. Schott said that in his judgment the best thing to do would be to put the rink up at public auction after advertising it about two weeks.

Matter of Rental

Judge Nicholas inquired whether or not Mrs. Wisenburgh would be willing to let the rent stop as soon as the building should be sold and Mr. Wisenburgh said she probably would be willing to let the rent stop if the person who purchased it assumed the responsibility of looking after the rink properly. The original lease which the Rink Co. holds does not expire until the first of next April. The monthly rent is $21.66. But the rent has not been paid for several months and this is what caused the receivership matter.

Dr. Hutton, one of the members of the Rink Co. has come to Coshocton on business and while here will go over the "ink books." The case brought by Manager Fuhr in Squibb Wmme's court will also be disposed of.

TOWN IS SWEEP BY FLOOD

Three Lives Known to Have Been Lost and Property Loss Will Reach Half Million Dollars—Fire Adds to Work of Ruin, Large Warehouse and Grocery Being Destroyed—Telegraphic Communication Cut Off and Details Are Lacking.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 27.—By the breaking of the big dam six miles above Augusta, the streets of the city are covered by from six to 12 feet of water, which is gradually rising. The dam was used to divert the water from the Savannah river into the canal, and was overtaxed by the heavy rains in the Carolinas and Georgia.

The big bridge across the Savannah river went down in the rush of waters, and the dam at the locks seven miles above the city collapsed, adding to the flood.

Three deaths are reported, two white persons and a negro, but no names are obtainable, as the only means of communication is by boat.

The current through the city streets is swift, but not fast enough to more than carry away debris, tree boxes, store boxes and loose signs.

Despite the fact that the city was warned that there was danger of the dams breaking, there will be considerable loss in business houses of all kinds. Estimates place the financial loss close to $500,000.

There were several fires reported, but as the fires are in outlying districts the extent of the damage can not be learned. It is said the Nixon & Danforth cotton warehouse was destroyed by fire, together with the Nixon wholesale grocery warehouse. A fire was also reported in the Georgia railway shops.

Despite the fact that the water stands six feet deep in the residence district of the city and is deeper in other portions, there has been no indication that people are suffering beyond being marooned in the upper stories of their dwellings.

STORM CLAIMS TWO

New York's Poor Forced to Seek Shelter in Morgue.

New York, Aug. 27.—A terrific downpour of rain, lasting more than 24 hours and attended by the coldest August weather New York has experienced for 23 years, was responsible for two deaths and great property damage. More than three inches of rain fell and the thermometer registered as low as 56 degrees. The gale tore up trees and leveled field crops in the vicinity of New York. Those who met death were John Lynch, who drowned in a sewer, and an unidentified cripple, who perished from exposure in an East Side hallway. Several buildings in course of construction collapsed when their foundations became inundated. At Fire Island the Surf hotel sank several inches and part of the building fell. Miss Oakley, daughter of the proprietor, was injured by falling plaster.

Hundreds of homeless men and women applied for shelter at the municipal lodging house, driven by the storm to seek some sort of cover, and finally the accommodations at the city institution were so overcrowded that many of the men had to be given quarters in the morgue. Never in the history of the municipal lodging house have so many applications for a night's shelter been received during the month of August.

Mine Fire is Under Control

26 BODIES ALREADY ARE RECOVERED

Victims of Oklahoma Disaster Are Suffocated Long Before Help Arrives—Fire Is Result of Miner's Attempt to Divide Barrel of Oil—Full Extent of the Disaster Will Not Be Known For Many Hours—Many Mules Lose Their Lives.

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 27.—Twenty-six dead bodies have been recovered from the Hailey-Ola coal mine No. 1, at Haileyville, 14 miles east of here, where a disastrous fire entombed a large number of miners shortly after they had descended for work. It is believed that 10 more bodies will be recovered.

Explorations in the channels revealed that none of the men met death by burning, but that all of them were suffocated. It is impossible yet for the rescuers to get far from the base of the main shaft, and it probably will be 24 hours before a thorough search of the entire mine can be made. Some of the channels are three-quarters of a mile long.

After the entombed miners had gone down in the case a fire broke out, occasioned by the ignition of a barrel of oil which a miner was trying to divide. The flames spread at once to the hoisting shaft and the air shaft, and all communication with the top was cut off. The first indication the people on top of the ground had of the trouble was the flames and smoke coming out of the top of the shaft. Hundreds of miners rushed to the scene and tried to get into the air shaft, but it was found that the cages, the cables and the guides had been burned. There was absolutely no help for the imprisoned miners.

Martin W. Littleton, whose speech nominating Parker at the St. Louis convention attracted national attention and who was prominent as Harry Thaw's attorney in the second trial of that case, is reported to be the selection of Tammany for the Democratic nomination for governor of New York.

SAXTON NOT GUILTY SAY DOZEN MEN

After being out ten minutes the jury in the case of Chas. Saxton, charged with driving a horse to death came in with a verdict of not guilty in Squire Straus' court at the city hall Wednesday evening at 5:45. H. C. Miller of Tiverton township, was foreman of the jury.

It is understood that two ballots were taken but the jury found that the evidence was entirely insufficient to warrant a conviction. Some of the witnesses had testified that Mr. Saxton was driving the horse on a walk when they saw him.

Wildly exaggerated tales had been circulated but when the witnesses were placed on the stand they stated the case very mildly. Some one placed the value of the horse at $2. Mrs. Mary Baggett used it to jog around over the country and Mr. Saxton borrowed it of her to drive to Blue Row near Conesville. The horse dropped dead on the road and statements were made that Saxton had abused the horse. Some of the statements may have been true but the testimony from the witness stand failed to bear out the first reports.

Sophy of Kravonia

By ANTHONY HOPE. Author of "THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

"Come, you've heard what I said, I suppose, though it wasn't meant for your ears, you know! Well, then, I mean just what I said, Marie."

"But what do you mean by it?" she persisted in a feverish, almost childish excitement. She turned on Sophy too. "And what do you mean by it, Sophy?" she cried.

Sophy passed a hand over her brow. A slow smile relieved the enlivened tension of her face. She seemed to smile in a whimsical surprise at herself. Her answer to Marie came vague and almost dreamy. "I-I thought of nothing, dear Marie," she said. Then, with a sudden low murmur of delighted laughter, she held her hands in the prince's again. She had thought of nothing but of that life together and their love.

"She'll share my life, Marie, and when the time comes, my throne," the prince said softly. He tried to persuade and soothe her with his gentle tones.

Marie Zerkovitch would not have it. Possessed by her old fear, her old foreboding, she flung away the arm she held, with an angry gesture. "It's ruin!" she cried. "Ruin! Ruin!" Her voice rang out through the old room and seemed to fill all the castle of Praslok with its dirgeful note.

"No," said he firmly. "Ruin will not come through me nor through her. It may be that ruin—what you call ruin—will come. It may be that I shall lose my life or my throne." He smiled a little. "Such changes and chances come as nothing new to a Stefanovitch. I have clever and bold men against me. Let them try! We'll try too! But ruin will not be by her fault nor through this. And if it were, don't I owe her my life? Should I refuse to risk for her the life she has given?" He dropped his voice to homelier, more familiar tones and ended, with a half laugh: "Come, little friend, you mustn't try to frighten Sergius Stefanovitch. It's better the house should end than live on in a coward, you know."

The plea was not perfect. There was wisdom as well as courage in question. Yet he would have maintained himself to be right in point of wisdom, too, had Marie pressed him on it. But her force was spent, her violence ended, and with it her expostulations. But not her terror and dismay. She threw herself into a chair and covered her face with her hands, sobbing bitterly.

The prince gently caressed her shaking shoulder, but he raised his eyes to Sophy, who had stood quiet through the scene.

"Are you ready for what comes, Sophy?" he asked.

"Monsieur, I am ready," she said, with head erect and her face set, but the next instant she broke into a low, yet rich and ringing laugh. It mingled strangely with Marie's sobs, which were gradually dying away, yet sounded still, an undertone of discord with Sophy's mirth. She stretched out her hands toward him again, whispering in an amused pity. "Poor child, she thought that we should be afraid!"

Out of the dusk of the quiet evening came suddenly the blare of a trumpet, blown from Volens by a favoring breeze. It sounded every evening at nightfall to warn the herdsmen in the hills of the closing of the gates and had so sounded from time beyond man's memory.

The prince raised his hand to bid her listen.

"In good Volens there is watch and ward for us!"

The echoes of the blast rang for an instant around the hills.

"And there is watch and ward and the glad sound of a trumpet in my heart, monsieur," she said.

The sobs were still, laughter was hushed, the echoes died away. In utter silence their hands and their eyes met. Only in their hearts love's clarion rang indomitable and marvelously glad.

Chapter Twenty

OFTEN there are clever brains about us of whose workings we care nothing save so far as they serve to the defter moving of our dishes or the more scientific brushing and folding of our clothes. Humorists and philosophers have described or conjectured or caricatured the world of those who wait on us, inviting us to consider how we may appear to the inward gaze of the eyes which are so obediently cast down before ours or so dutifully alert to anticipate our orders. As a rule, we decline the invitation. The task seems at once difficult and unnecessary. Enough to remember that the owners of the eyes have ears and mouths also! A small leak left unattended will empty the largest cask at last. It is well to keep that in mind both in private concerns and in affairs of public magnitude.

The king's body servant, Emile Lepage, had been set a-thinking. This was the result of the various and profuse scoldings which he had undergone for calling young Count Alexis "prince." The king's brief, sharp words at the conference had been elaborated into a reproach both longer and sterner than his majesty was wont to trouble himself to administer. He had been very strong on the utter folly of putting such ideas into the boy's head. Lepage was pretty clear that the idea had come from the boy's head into his, but he said nothing more of that. The boy himself scolded Lepage, first for having been overheard, second, and as Lepage guessed, after being scolded himself very roundly, for using the offending title at all. Meekly Lepage bore this cross also, indeed, with some amusement and a certain touch of pity for young Alexis, who was not a prince and obviously could not make out why. In the books a king's sons were always princes, even though there were, as in those glorious days there often were, fifty or three score of them.

Then Countess Ellenburg scolded him. The king's "It's absurd" was rankling sorely in her mind. Her scolding was in her heaviest manner, very religious. She called Heaven to witness that never by word or deed had she done anything to give her boy such a notion. The days are gone by when Heaven makes overt present answer. Nothing happened. She roundly charged Lepage with fostering the idea for his own purposes. He wanted to set the Prince of Slavna against his little brother, she supposed, and to curry favor with the rising sun at the poor child's cost.

She was very effective, but she angered Lepage almost beyond endurance. By disposition he was thoroughly good natured if sardonic and impassive. He could not suffer the accusation of having injured the pretty boy for his own ends. It was both odious and absurd. He snapped back smartly at her. "I hope nobody will do more to put wrong ideas in his head than I have done, Mme. la Comtesse." In a fury she drove him from the room, but she had started ever so slightly. Lepage's alert brain jumped at the signal.

Finally Stenoviec himself had a lecture for poor, much lectured Lepage. It was one of the miscalculations to which an overcautious cunning is prone. Stenoviec was gentle and considerate, but he was very urgent—urgent above all that nothing should be said about the episode, neither about it nor about the other reprehensions. Silence, silence, silence was his burden. Lepage thought more and more. It is better to put up with gossip than to give the idea that the least gossip would be a serious offense. People gossip without thinking. It's easy come and gone, easy speaking and easy for getting, but stringent injunctions, no talk are apt to make men think. References to the rising sun also may breed reflection in the satellites of a setting orb. Neither Countess Ellenburg nor General Stenoviec had been as well advised as usual in this essen tially trumpery matter.

In short, nervousness had been betrayed. Whence came it? What did it mean? If it meant anything, could Lepage turn that thing to account? The king's favorite attendant was no favorite with Countess Ellenburg. For Lepage, too, the time might be very short! He would not injure the boy, as the angry mother had believed, or at least suggested, but, without question of that, there was no harm in a man's looking out for himself, or if there were Lepage was clear in thinking that the countess and the general were not fit preachers of such a highly exacting gospel.

Lepage concluded that he had something to sell. His wares were a suspicion and a fact. Selling the suspicion wronged nobody. He would give no warranty with it—caveat emptor. Selling the fact was disobedience to the king, his master. "Disobedience, yes, injury, no," said Lepage, with a bit of casuistry. Besides, the king, too, had scolded him.

Moreover, the Prince of Slavna had always treated M. Emile Lepage with distinguished consideration. The Bourbon blood, no doubt, stretched out hands to la belle France in M. Lepage's person.

Something to sell! Who was his buyer? Whose interest could be won by his suspicion, whose friendship bought with his fact? The ultimate buyer was plain enough, but Lepage could not go to Praslok, and he did not approve of correspondence, especially with Colonel Stafnitz in practical control of the household. He sought a go-between and a personal interview. At least he could take a walk. The servants were not prisoners. Even conspirators must stop somewhere on pain of doing their own cooking and the rest. At a quarter past 8 in the evening, having given the king his dinner and made him comfortable for the next two hours, Lepage sallied forth and took the road to Slavna

He was very carefully dressed, wore a flower in his buttonhole and had dropped a discreet blint about a lady in conversation with his peers. If ladies often demand excuses they may furnish them too. Present seriousness invoked aid from bygone frivolity.

At 10 o'clock he returned, still most spruce and orderly and with a well satisfied air about him. He had found a purchaser for his suspicion and his fact. His pocket was the better lined, and he had received flattering expressions of gratitude and assurances of favor. He felt that he had raised a buttress against future assaults of fortune. He entered the king's dressing room in his usual noiseless and unobtrusive manner. He was not aware that General Stenoviec had quitted it just a quarter of an hour before, bearing in his hand a document which he had submitted for his majesty's signature. The king had signed it and indorsed the cover "Urgent."

"Ah, Lepage, where have you been?" asked the king.

"Just to get a little air and drink a glass at the Golden Lion."

"You look gay, then that!" smiled the king. Evidently his anger had passed. Perhaps he wished to show as much to an old servant whom he liked and valued.

Conscience stricken, or so appearing, Lepage tore the flower from his coat. "I beg your majesty's pardon, I ought to have removed it before entering your majesty's presence, but I was told you wished to retire at once, sir, so I hurried here immediately."

The king gave a weary yawn. "Yes, I'll go to bed at once, Lepage, and let me sleep as long as I can. This fog and the life isn't very amusing." He passed his hand wearily over his brow. "My head aches. Isn't the room very close, Lepage? Open the window."

"It has begun to rain, sir."

"Never mind. Let's have the rain too. At least it's fresh."

Lepage opened a window which looked over the Krath. The king rose, Lepage hastened to offer his arm, which his majesty accepted. They went together to the window. A sudden storm had gathered. Rain was pelting down in big drops.

"It looks like being a rough night," remarked the king.

"I'm afraid it does, sir," Lepage agreed.

"We're lucky to be going to our beds."

"Very, sir," answered Lepage, wondering whose opposite fate his majesty was pitying.

"I shouldn't care, even if I were a young man and a sound one, to ride to Praslok tonight."

"To Praslok, sir?" There was surprise in Lepage's voice. He could not help it. Luckily it sounded quite natural to the king. It was certainly not a night to ride, five and twenty miles and into the hills unless your business was very urgent.

"Yes, to Praslok. I've had my breath of air. You can shut the window, Lepage."

The king returned to the fireplace and stood warming himself. Lepage closed the window, drew the curtains and came to the middle of the room, where he stood in respectful readiness, and underneath that a very lively curiosity.

"Yes," said the king slowly. "Captain Markart goes to Praslok tonight with a dispatch for his royal highness, you know. Business, Lepage, urgent business! Everything must yield to that." The king enunciated this virtuous maxim as though it had been the rule of his life. "No time to lose, Lepage, so the captain goes tonight, but I'm afraid he'll have a rough ride—very rough."

"I'm afraid so, sir," said Lepage, and added strictly in his thoughts, "And so will M. Zerkovitch!"

Captain Markart was entirely of his majesty's opinion as he set out on his journey to Praslok. His ride would be rough, dark and solitary—the last by Stenoviec's orders. Markart was not afraid. He was well armed, but he expected to be very bored and knew that he would be very wet by the time he reached the castle. He breathed a fervent curse on the necessities of state, of which the minister had informed him, as he buttoned up his heavy cavalry overcoat and rode across the bridge on to the main road on the right bank an hour before midnight.

THE HUMOR OF MURPHY

Tammany the righteous! Tammany the protector of the rights of the people, the lightning of virtue blasting the foul tree of corruption! Charles F. Murphy must surely be dilly-dallying with the fine art of irony. He is growing playful with the past. That mournful countenance which has been interpreted as "dim and distant unrequited politics stamped indelibly" has something of humor behind it.

Patrick H. McCarren, state senator of New York and boss of Brooklyn Democracy, has long had a feud with Murphy. He is anxious to keep the party of his part of the metropolis within his fist. Murphy is just as anxious to take it away from him. They have struggled in secret and in the open, above board and under the table. Each has made statements to the public which is mere dust-tossing. They don't tell anything. The bosses didn't intend they should. Murphy has had the latest say. It is here that he uncovers that unsuspected streak of comicality.

He wrote: "We want nothing of the Democracy of Kings county, except that they should send, to the general councils of the party honorable and clean men with whom decent men from other parts of the state may associate without shame."

McCarren is not a subtle person.
He hasn't the delicate touch which Murphy has so artistically displayed.
Yet he is quick to take a hint. He will be coming back with the humor of Brooklyn, broad and direct and resonant with the clamor of the slapstick.

This war of the bosses is the most entertaining note so far remarked in the campaign.

MODERN YANKEE DOODLE.

Revolt of Woman's Trades Union Members Against Mar's Tyranny.

A feminine Yankee Doodle is in the saddle. Having revolted from the tyranny of "the Yankee dude," she gives notice that from now on she means to "ride a pony, stick a feather in her cap and dine on macaroni."

This is the ultimatum of twenty-five fair members of the Chicago Woman's Trades Union league chorus in their new song, entitled "The Modern Yankee Doodle."

At the request of Miss Mary Mc-Dowell, who launched the chorus a few weeks ago, two new songs have been written for the league by Miss Gertrude Barnum of Chicago. These are now in rehearsal and will be sung
at the annual convention of the Woman's Trades Union league in New York city in September, says the Chicago Tribune. Here is the first, which should satisfy even the sniffling:

A MODERN YANKEE DOODLE.
Yankee men they had their way
And thought it fine and dandy.
Locked the women in all day
And stopped their cries with candy.
Yankee Doodle, Doodle Doo,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Said to women: "Who are you?
Be glad to get the candy?"
Yankee women caught right on
And thought it quite handy
To have no say and get no pay.
They threw a hate on candy.
Yankee Doodle, Doodle Doo,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

You'd be sorry if you knew
How sick they grew of candy.
"Yankee man," said Yankee maid,
"With you no words we'll bandy.
Hand to us the front door key."
And we'll send back your candy.
"Yankee dude, what can you do?
Yankee Doodle Dandy."
We like freedom, same as you.
And won't be hushed with candy.

"We mean to roam the great wide world.
We mean to ride a pony.
Stick a feather in our caps
And dine on macaroni."
"Yankee dude, what can you do?
Yankee Doodle Dandy."
We mean to live on solid food.
And you can keep your candy."

Yankee dude now helps the maid
To mount upon his pony.
Likes the feather in her cap
And shares the macaroni.
Yankee Doodle, Doodle Doo,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Is glad to have his girl along.
They both enjoy the song.

Honor Farragut's Memory.
Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 27.—Some three thousand shipmates, relatives,
friends and admirers of Admiral Glasgow Farragut, paid a tribute to the memory of the hero of many battles of the sea by the dedication of a memorial tablet in the Portsmouth navy yard. Admiral George Dewey, who served with Farragut, lifted the covering from the tablet.

Thugs' Victim Identified.
Chicago, Aug. 27.—A man found in an alley with his skull fractured from a blow was identified as Frank Bigelow, an actor and manager of a theatrical company.

The Amoeba.
The amoeba (Greek "change"), the supposed pioneer in the line of living forms, is a naked mass of living matter, or protoplasm, flowing out in all directions in "blunt processes," and the endlessly varying form has earned for the simple animal the popular name of "amoeba" (Proteus animalulae). They are all minute, but some are distinctly visible to the unaided eye.
The jelly-like creature flows along the surface of stone or plant by the slow protrusion of its ever changing processes and in this way gets around its food. It is all stomach, any part of it taking hold of and digesting the food that happens to come in contact with it. On attaining its maximum size the amoeba draws itself out and breaks into two daughter amoebas, each of which contains half of the mother nucleus. This simple organism seems to exhibit in small compass the usual animal functions. It feeds, secretes, grows and reproduces itself. — New

TAFT ON BANKING
Says Guaranty of Deposits Is Premium on Recklessness.
Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 27.—That it "puts a premium on reckless banking and is an inducement to reckless banking," is the answer given by Judge Taft in response to a direct question state what in his opinion, the vital objection to the proposed plan to guaranty deposits in national banks.

He said, "That is the fundamental objection. Relieved of the responsibility to and the fear of his de-positors, the tendency would be to induce exploitation, manipulation and the use of assets of banks in a speculative way. It would promote speculation at the expense of his fellow bankers, and that ultimately means at the expense of the depositors. Any proposition as to the amount of the tax that should be assessed as based on the present rate of loss is an erroneous basis, as the danger of loss of deposits is increased vastly by the proposed system, so that the percentage of the tax would have to be vastly increased."

Populace Greets Bryan.
Salem, Ill., Aug. 27.—No crowd of equal size or enthusiasm ever turned out in this city, the birthplace of William J. Bryan, as when the Democratic candidate stopped over to greet his old friends and neighbors. The whole population was up and on hand
early to extend a hearty welcome when Mr. Bryan reached here. The principal event of the day was a speech by Mr. Bryan from a platform in the courthouse grounds, in which he appealed to the "Roosevelt Republicans" to support the Democratic ticket, because, he said, they could not hope for a realization of the promised reforms of their party. Mr. Taft,
he said, was not the heir to Republican reforms.

The Dollar That Can't Be Spent

By Herbert Kaufman.
Every dollar spent in advertising is not only a seed dollar which grows a profit for the merchant, but is actually retained by him even after he has paid it to the publisher.

Advertising creates a good will worth the cost of the publicity.

Advertising really costs nothing. While it uses funds it does not use them up. It helps the founder of a business to grow rich and then keeps his business from not dying when he does.

It eliminates the personal equation. It perpetuates confidence in the store and makes it possible for a merchant to withdraw from business without having the profits of the business withdrawn from him. It changes a name to an institution—an institution which will survive after the death of its builder.

It is really an insurance policy which costs nothing—pays a premium each year instead of calling for one and renders it possible to change
the entire personnel of a business without disturbing its prosperity.

Advertising renders the business stronger than the man—independent of his presence. It per-manentizes systems of merchandising, the track of which is left for others to follow.

A business which is not advertised must rely upon the personality of its proprietor, and personality in business is a decreasing factor. The public does not want to know the man who owns the store
—it isn't interested in him but in his goods.

When an unadvertised business is sold it is only worth as much as its stock of goods and its fixtures.
There is no good will to be paid for—it does not exist—it has not been created. The name over the door means nothing except to the limited stream of people from the immediate neighborhood, any of whom could tell you more about some store ten miles away which has regularly delivered its shop news to their breakfast tables.

It is as shortsighted for a man to build a business which dies with his death or ceases with his inaction as it is unfair for him not to provide for the continuance of its income to his family.

Just Satisfied Herself.
People of all sorts weigh themselves
on the penny in the slot machines found widely distributed in public places, but never before had this man, anyway, seen anybody weigh on one of them anything but himself or herself as this weigher, a woman, did in a subway station.

She came in carrying in one hand a muff and in the other a box of polished oak that was narrow and proportionately high and maybe a foot in length.
That the box was heavy was shown by the fact that the leather handle had been stretched somewhat by its weight.

And apparently its present carrier
had found it heavy and was curious about its weight, for now she set the box on the platform of one of those weighing machines and dropped a penny in the slot. It weighed ten pounds, certainly a heavy box to carry. That was all she wanted to know—didn't weigh herself. She just picked the box up again, this time with a smile, and went aboard the train. — New York

Party For

Bride-Elect

Miss Mina Finly was the guest of honor at two delightful social af-fairs given Wednesday by Miss Min-nie Almack at her home on South

Fourth street—or perhaps it would be better to say, one long season of gayety for there was no lapse be-tween the pleasures of the afternoon and those of the evening. The first according to the schedule however,

was the tea given in the afternoon

to which Miss Mildred Daniels of Col-umbus, Miss Grace Myser of Canton,

Miss Mary Evans of Trin-wav, Miss Guida Renfrew of Walnut Hill and served out on the porch and gayety reigned supreme.

Then later in the evening Carl

Stewart, Ed. Crawford, James R. Johnston, Jr., Tracy Renfrew and

Earl D'ekerson arrived for the chaf-ing dish supper and the fun that went with it. A game of "Hearts and Mittens"—quite appropriate to such an affair—made a lot of fun and a very enjoyable impromptu program of music and readings was given by Miss Daniels and Miss Myser, both exceedingly talented girls. Miss Myser is a graduate of the Emerson

School of Oratory in Boston.

The affair was a very successful one and a happy prelude to the Finly-Stewart wedding which is to be solemnized a week from today

Cures Coughs And Colds Hyomei Gives Relief in 10 Minutes —Cures Over Night.

Everybody knows, or ought to know, that Hyomei is recognized among scientists as the specific for Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis and Hay Fever, but there are a great many people who do not know that Hyomei will cure a cough or a cold in less than 24 hours.

But everyone should know that the soothing, baby and antiseptic air of Hyomei when breathed over the raw and inflamed membrane of the nose and throat will instantly allay the inflammation, and will effect a prompt cure.

Complete Hyomei outfit, including inhaler, costs only $1.00 at C. E. Anderson's drug store, extra bottles, if afterwards needed, will cost but 50 cents.

Joseph M. Harbaugh, Hildredge, Neb., writes: "I have used your Hyomei in my family for two years or more and find it one of the best remedies we ever used for a cold or sore throat. We find that it gives quick relief in cases of catarrh."

GIRL HAS A CLEW Opened Letter Which May Throw Light on Loudonville Tragedy.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 27. — While Miss Flossie Hoshal of Rippey, Ia., now refuses to discuss the contents of a letter from Mrs. Mary Bayard to her son, Ralph Bayard, which she opened, it is said that at the time of the Loudonville (O.) shooting of Mr. Stein and Miss Porter the young lady gave friends to understand that the letter had a bearing on the case, in fact that it would do much to clear up the mystery. Miss Hoshal is the daughter of Mayor Hoshal of Rippey, and is a neighbor to the Bayards.

With his mother in Ohio, Ralph Bayard, about to leave for a trip in the Dakotas, asked Miss Hoshal to look at any mail that might come to him, and if it appeared to be important to forward it to his address in Dakota. A letter from Loudonville came to young Bayard the Sunday of the shooting. Miss Hoshal opened it, but did not forward it, so it is said. She said no more about it until a copy of the newspaper containing the story of the mysterious shooting was seen. Then she is said to have declared that the letter would have more than a "little bearing upon that affair. When young Bayard returned to Rippey the letter was given to him, and since then nothing has been seen or heard of it.

THE EVOLUTION OF MAXINE ELLIOTT.

MAXINE ELLIOTT'S stage career is a study in evolution; it is the story of the development of a star from the nebula of a mere stage beauty. About a dozen years ago Miss Elliott played walking parts in Willard's company. She had beauty of a cold, cameo type, with dark eyes and hair, a classic face and figure—a marble Galatea unawakened to life. She had stage presence and dignity, but lacked the animation that comes from red coruscations that are doing their duty. She seemed but a breathing bit of scenery; her acting, too, was anaemic, and as mechanical as an automatic doll wound up with a key.

But that was when this girl from Maine, daughter of a sea-captain, made her first attempt to get a foothold to scale the heights of success. She had been educated at the Notre Dame Academy in Roxbury, Mass., and had accompanied her father on a voyage to South America and Spain. This summed up her worldly experience—then she came to New York with a romantic yearning for the stage. For a girl of sixteen she had shown ambition, tenacity and a determination to win a place, and it was only after she had braved most disheartening delays that she secured the engagement with Willard as Felicia Unfraville in "The Middleman."

But Miss Elliott tensed hard, she was in earnest, and gradually gentle ease took the place of tense self-consciousness; she came to life, her emotions seemed awakened and her beauty was illumined and intensified by the mind. She tried more ambitious roles, as Virginia Fleetwood, in "John Needham's Double," Beatrice Selwyn, in "A Fool's Paradise," and Lady Gilding, in "The Professor's Love Story," with a growing success—the bud of no promise was blossoming into a rose of real attainment.

As a member of Rose Coghlan's company she attracted the attention of Augustin Daly, and in January, 1895, became associated with his splendid band of players, in roles second to those of Ada Rehan. It was a needed training; it broadened Miss Elliott, gave her ease and confidence, deepened her capacity for expression and strengthened her mastery of technique. Two seasons of this work preceded her Australian trip under the management of Nat Goodwin, to whom she was married in 1898. The highest point of her art she has yet attained is her simple, clever work in "Her Own Way," a Clyde Fitch play which pictures New York society, not as it really is, but in his own way, as seen through Mr. Fitch's opera-glasses.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress will surely follow. For this distress everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny Stomach, Heart and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by C. E. Anderson, Coshocton and C. M. Ferguson, Roscoe.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 27. — Sangamon county will be spared the expense of trying Mrs. Kate Howard, indicted for complicity in the recent race riots here, she having committed suicide by swallowing acid while being placed under arrest.

Many witnesses testified before the special grand jury now in session that Mrs. Howard was one of the ring-leaders of the mob which wrecked Loper's restaurant and cafe. She was the first person indicted and was held on several counts in the sum of $10,000, which she furnished. When she was released she said she would never be arrested again.

Shortly after the special grand jury returned another indictment against her charging murder in connection with the recent lynchings. Deputy Sheriff Kramer was sent to Mrs. Howard's rooms to arrest her. Mrs. Howard received the officer at the door. She secretly swallowed a large dose of poison, then said, "I'm ready to go now." She accompanied the deputy to the jail, two blocks away, and was just entering the jail door, when she fell dead.

Brokers Put Blame on Banks

[Associated Dailies Telegram] NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A. O. Brown & Co., brokers, issued an official statement regarding their failure, today, and say it was caused by the sudden refusal of banks to certify the firm's checks as they had always done, and by the attitude of the stock exchange. The statement lends color to the report that the firm was marked for slaughter by the exchange and banks, as a warning to others similarly incensed.

Fleet Sails From Sydney.
Sydney, Aug. 27.—The fleet of American battleships sailed from this port this morning, bound for Melbourne. The sky was cloudless, the sun was warm and only a moderate sea was running. At 8 a. m. the flagship Connecticut weighed anchor and led the warships in single line out past the sloping shores of the harbor, which were crowded with thousands of persons who had gathered to bid the fleet farewell.

Cincinnati Player Hurt.
Piqua, O., Aug. 27.—While playing in an exhibition game here between the Cincinnati National league team and a team representing this town, Michael Mitchell, right fielder of the Cincinnati club, suffered injuries which will, it is said, keep him out of the game for the remainder of the season. Mitchell turned his ankle by sliding to second base, tearing the ligaments loose from the bone. The local team was beaten by a score of 10 to 3.

Culpepper, a grocer, in his store, David Webb is dead, William Webb is fatally wounded, and Culpepper is seriously injured. The trouble, which was the culmination of an old feud, came to a head when the brothers assaulted Culpepper in his store, threatening to return and complete the job. Culpepper armed himself with a double-barreled shotgun, and when the Webbs entered the door he opened fire on them with fatal effect, being himself stabbed by William Webb after the latter had been shot.

Dr. M. J. Love, of Erie county, an old Coshocton boy, was the leading candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator at the convention at Bellevue this week, and it took 60 ballots to settle the question. Dr. Love was backed by both the "dry" and "wet" elements, both of which are very active in the counties where vineyards are a great industry as he is known as a fair and honest man whose record is marked by the square deal. The nomination went to Atty. Palmer, who was personally backed by some of the state anti-saloon leaders.
